>This poem is just a little something I wrote up one night when I was feeling sad and the weather matched the one in the story. It takes >place when Darien and Serena break up in Sailor Moon R. It is told by Serena. English isn't my first language so I'm sorry if there >are spelling mistakes.

What a dreadful night I think as I reach for my diary. A habit I started >a while back. "Write it when you can't say it." I say. There's a reason why I'm depressed tonight, It happened on this very day. A somber >anniversary is what today is. I open my diary and begin to write.
>I hear the rain fall outside >on this dark stormy night.
>It's been a month since you left me,
>a month since my heart broke.
>Broken like the pieces of a mirror,
>falling to rest, forgotten on the ground
>like the very rain that is falling.
>Piece by piece.
Oh!
>
How could you be so so cruel to me?
Leaving me miserable?
Not even a good bye was spoken.
Or any kind words.
No, not anything to mend this shattered soul.
And as I hear the rain outside,
I make a vow, never again will I be hurt so.

No, not ever, no.
Feeling a lot better now, I close my diary, put it away and think:
> "At least while I was writing, it stopped raining."

file.
